

SPC WATERPROOF Flooring

Generations Group SPC-limited Warranty

Common sense exclusions for “Waterproof flooring”

SPC flooring, commonly referred to as a waterproof flooring is made with a PVC/ calcium carbonate composite core. Those materials are waterproof. The flooring is waterproof, however, certain water or moisture conditions that may be present in a home or specific installation will certainly impact the installation of that floor. Clearly, an SPC floor will react to the environment into which it is placed. The flooring itself, will not eliminate or fully cover up subfloor conditions that may exist. An uneven sub floor or a sub floor with cracks, holes and voids may cause the floor to buckle or to peak at the joints. In addition, excessive moisture present in a slab may cause hydro-static pressure which will cause the floor to peak or to “pop up” at the joints. These conditions indicate that a proper floor preparation did not take place and are NOT covered under the manufactures warranty. Please consult your floorcovering contractor and/or installation professional to insure your floor is properly prepared prior to installation of any floor.
